Dredging Crows Nest River at Coleman Is Urged

When town council met in Coleman Tuesday night members agreed that the town approach the provincial government to request that the Crows Nest River, passing through south and southwest Coleman, be dredged as residents living in this certain area are being faced with the problem of flooded basements.

This problem arose shortly after the government dredged and slightly changed the course of the river in the Willow Drive area, a suburb of Coleman. The work on the river was done by the provincial government as Willow Drive lies in an Improvement District. Dredging operations were done just over a year ago and since the work was completed residents in Coleman claim that basements are being flooded.

A letter was read by the town secretary-treasurer advising that the municipal convention would be held in Edmonton on October 27 and 28. Mayor Frank Aboussary, who is president of the Union of Alberta Municipalities, town secretary-treasurer Trevor Collister, Councillor George Jenkins and possibly one more councillor will attend the affair.

Former Coleman Hockey Player Retires

Marshall D. Stitt of 123-18th, St. North Lethbridge has retired from federal government service after 24 years in the elevator service. He played hockey for Coleman from 1913 to 1916 before joining the Ball Grain Co. in Barons in 1921. He then transferred to the Alberta Pacific Grain Co. and worked at Monarch until 1923. Mr. Stitt began work at the Government elevator in Lethbridge in 1931 as a machinist. He worked his way up until he became annex man in 1951 a position he has held until his retirement last week.

The egg, while small, contains an excellent group of nutrients. Phosphorus, calcium, iron, fat, protein and vitamin A contained in the egg are all necessary to health. The diet should include at least three eggs a week.

Fire Prevention Week

By proclamation the Governor General of Canada will declare the week of October 9-15, 1955, be observed as Fire Prevention Week across the Nation.

This week is always the calendar week including October 9, the anniversary of the great Chicago fire of 1887. Such a disaster serves to underline the necessity of bringing before the public a much needed awareness of Fire Prevention.

Fire Prevention Week should not be regarded just as a seven-day period for projecting the prevention programs, displaying posters all over the community, school drills and civic group meetings. Rather, it should be regarded as the week of initiation of a year-round activity promoted to make our country a safer place in which to live.

Fire Prevention Week is not a new institution. It has, over a period of years, developed increasing significance and earned a respected place in the regular affairs of every progressive community in Canada and the United States. It signifies the commencement of a campaign which should be carefully planned so as to enlist the co-operation of every citizen and of every organization in the community for a concerted effort to prevent, as far as possible, loss of life and property as a result of fires.

Response to Fire Prevention Week should be spontaneous and enthusiastic. All citizens sincere in their desire to see the country's economy make progress have a stake in Fire Prevention Week. They realize full well that property destroyed by fire is irrevocably lost and the community and the nation suffer as the consequence of such loss. Economic disaster to a community often follows on the heels of a large fire.

Let us look at the latest available annual fire loss record in our country. The total property loss by fire was $84,270,896.00 representing a loss per person of $5.70. These losses represent an increase of about $4,000,000.00 over the previous year when the total loss was $80,902,205.00, with a loss per person of $5.61. The record shows $7,319 fires, an increase of 3,418 over the previous year. The loss of life by fire was 477, as compared to 562 in the previous year.

It is indeed tragic to note the record shows that more than half of all the fires in Canada occur in homes. This fact alone should emphasize beyond any doubt the need for fire prevention.

This heavy toll of destruction of life and property by fire must not continue. A strong and vigorous campaign should be launched during Fire Prevention Week and followed up without restraint throughout the year.

CHRISTMAS NOVEMBER 26th

Two Projects That Could Help The Crows Nest Pass

We see by a report from the United Nations economic commission that Europe is facing ever-decreasing stocks of coal and in the last quarters of this year will see heavy imports from the United States. Why could not our coal be shipped through Vancouver to Europe, or if this not feasible, why not put an embargo on certain tonnage being imported from the U.S. to Eastern markets and divert a few million tons to the West. The answers from our government has never satisfied us here in the West, in time of national emergencies our coal was used in the east and there was no question of it not being just as good as stated by Eastern interests.

Operation New Blairmore Arena Discussed by the Council

BLAIRMORE — Blairmore town council at its meeting Friday evening discussed plans for the operation of the new Blairmore arena, which it is expected will be put into use in the next two months. One of the main items that arose regarding the hiring of an ice man. Members felt the person hired should be a competent ice maker and familiar with artificial ice plants. Members agreed that he would probably have a year round position to act as caretaker and ice maker of the arena winter and to care for the parks and ball field during the summer months.

The matter of putting a concrete floor in the skating arena this year so that the rink could be used for summer events was discussed and it was decided that this project would be left for another year until the grounds have settled and there is no danger of heaving or cement not setting properly in cold weather.

It was decided to draw up a questionnaire relating to admissions to be charged, times for practices, admissions to games, rent to be charged to curling clubs, business advertising fees, ice man's wages and duties. The questions

How about letters to our M.P. bringing to the attention of the government that Canada and especially Western Canada can supply overseas orders if the government really wanted to.

Another is the proposed building of a federal prison in Southern Alberta or Southwest B.C. announced by the Federal Government last week. Built in the Crows Nest Pass it would supply work and bolster business in this area. The Pass is not dead yet and has very great possibilities if exploited. How about our boards of trade and other interest bodies looking into this project and push for it in this area.

will be put to other arenas in Southern Alberta so the local arena has some guidance.

A letter was received by council regarding the possible institution of an Old Folks Home to serve the Crows Nest Pass area. The letter suggested that either the Forestry or old RCMP building might possibly be used for a home of this type. Although council sympathized with the idea it was felt that an institution of this type could not possibly be supported by one town only. It was agreed that John McDade, secretary of the local organization of Old Age Pensioners, be contacted in order that a meeting of Crows Nest Pass towns hold a meeting to be attended by William Kovach, M.L.A. to further discuss the matter and find out if the idea is feasible.

Arena Insurance
Fire Chief Tom Gibos informed council that he had purchased 250 feet of rubber lined hose for the local arena which would be used for flooding the ice surfaces as well as for fire protection. Insurance on the arena building which is now set at $85,000 will be increased to $125,000 as soon as the arena is completed.

Local Fish & Game Assn. Plan Dam On Ellison Creek

Mr. Jack Chalmers, head of the Fish and Game Assn. in Coleman stated this week plans are under way for the erection of a dam across Ellison Creek just above the beaver dams. When this dam has been built it will be stocked with 40,000 fingerlings. It is hoped to have this dam erected this fall so as early plantings can be made. With plenty of natural food in this area fishing will be greatly improved in the next couple of years. Sportmen are urged to get behind the association in restocking the streams in this area and to promote further outdoor sports such as hunting and fishing. Your membership would be a great help in this direction. Further reports are expected shortly on this project.

Leo Vanderwell, driver of the Spic and Span Cleaners truck from Fernie, had the misfortune to crash while enroute to Fernie last Monday evening. Leo was travelling home after a busy day in the Pass when a car failed to give him the right of way and rather than hit the car Leo took to the ditch, smashing the truck beyond repair. Leo sustained two or three broken ribs and a good shaking up. A hitch hiker that he picked up was hospitalized but no serious injuries were reported. Leo's very able assistant Marge Hogan took over for a few days. Leo was back on the job last Saturday.

Make Changes For Trucks At Crossings

Under recent amendments to the Vehicles and Highway Traffic Act, several changes have been made concerning the necessity of certain vehicles stopping at railway crossings.

Former regulations called for all trucks to stop but changes eliminate all but three categories from the regulation.

Vehicles required to stop are those carrying passengers for hire, school buses carrying children and vehicles transporting explosive substances or inflammable liquids.

Further amendments state that all vehicles are required to stop at crossings where electrical or mechanical signal devices warn of an approaching train or where an approaching train is dangerously near a crossing.

There has been a change made in the procedure of applying for chauffeurs' licences. An applicant is no longer required to submit two pictures of himself when making application.

To avoid colds, keep away from people who have them, especially if they cough and sneeze without covering their noses and mouths with a disposable tissue. Wear rubbers in damp weather to avoid wet feet and chills.

Model ships mark important events in Canadian history

MONTREAL.—Model ships separated by centuries and continents are sharing the same berth at Montreal's historic Chateau de Ramezay, a Canadian Press story reveals.

The good ship Emerillon, smallest of Jacques Cartier's three vessels, rests in the centre of the exhibition. Across the room, lake carriers such as the 715-foot modern giant, T. R. McLagan, represent progress, in miniature.

The marine exhibition is being held in the attic of the chateau where the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal is celebrating the building's 250th anniversary.

Fighting ships

The collection amassed by curator Louis Carrier ranges from 150-year-old canoes to models of ships of the line that saw action at Trafalgar, and of modern Canadian warships.

There is a canoe that Pierre Ste-Marie dug out of a single tree trunk 150 years ago to carry mail between Montreal and Longueuil. It still looks solid enough to carry out the same task.

Much of the material was brought up from the chateau basement, where it has long been in storage.

A ship's steering wheel, almost five feet in diameter, stands at the rear of the upstairs room housing the exhibit. Behind it is a five-foot wooden carving of a sailor of the last century. A note tacked to its uniform explains that it once served as a sign over Joe Boer's tavern on the waterfront.

Indian canoes

Besides Ste-Marie's canoe is another dug out of a tree trunk by Iroquois Indians in 1880. A third was built by the Abenaki tribe downriver from Montreal in 1875.

One of the birchbark canoes built during the last century is coated with a native paint composed of clay and plant oils.

A model of a vessel, the Virginie, bought by a Lt. George Macrae of the Royal Navy from French prisoners taken at Trafalgar and made by them during captivity, rests at one side of the room. Beside it is a model of an 1856 British steam corvette.

The marine exhibition is only part of the celebrations marking the chateau's anniversary. When the marine museum is removed later this summer, a display of land transportation models and, chiefly built around steam locomotives and railway coaches, takes over.

Bulb planting time is here say experts

August to early October is bulb planting time, advise horticulturists at the Beaveridge Experimental Farm. A little thought and effort during this period can result in a harvest of beauty through the spring and summer months.

Particularly attractive are the early blooms — the bright blue squills, the yellow fritillaries and the multi-colored tulips. Then come the lilies in all their varied forms and shades. For those who have had trouble raising lilies a suggestion might be welcome.

A friable, well-drained soil is required by these plants, the horticulturists say. The cold clay subsoil of the Peace River region is not conducive to their comfort. A special cultural method employed at Beaveridge involves replacement of this subsoil.

A trench 18 inches deep and 15 inches wide is dug and the bottom of the trench filled with a mixture of equal parts of topsoil, sand and peat. The trench is filled to within two inches of the required level of planting, then covered with a two-inch layer of sand in which the bulbs are planted. The remainder of the trench is then filled with soil mixture similar to that in the bottom of the trench.

Many lilies can be grown successfully in the Peace River region and the grower need by no means limit himself to the most hardy. Choice varieties are now available that will well repay the care required. A useful guide is the circular "Recommended Herbaceous Perennials" obtainable from the Experimental Farm at Beaveridge. Based on extensive tests, this circular contains a valuable list of bulbs and other perennials well suited to conditions of the Peace River country.

7-Foot turtle gives battle

HALIFAX.—A fisherman said he almost lost out in "rip-and-tuck" battle with a 670-pound tropical turtle harpooned off Halifax.

Howard Smith of nearby Sambro said he landed the seven-foot turtle after an hour-long battle. Fisheries officials here recalled that a turtle tipping the scales at 1,400 pounds had been landed in Cape Breton waters just a few days ago. It was also of a tropical species.

Just why these tropical turtles are headed northward is not known but there has been speculation that the Atlantic is getting warmer and attracting them away from their natural home.

Over 200 locker plants licensed in Saskatchewan

REGINA.—Licensing of three additional frozen food locker plants in Saskatchewan — at Mankota, Hodgeville and Harris — was announced recently by the provincial department of agriculture, S. S. Swanson, the department's supervisor of frozen food lockers, pointed out that a total of 220 locker plants have been licensed in the province since The Frozen Food Lockers Act came into force in 1946.

These plants, he said, are now serving approximately 75,000 individual locker renters, and during 1954 they stored over 21,000,000 pounds of foodstuffs. In addition, the increasing number of home freezers in use in the province has resulted in locker plant operators being called on to provide additional processing services, such as cutting, wrapping, ageing, grinding and quick freezing.

Any application for a licence to operate a locker plant in Saskatchewan must be made to the minister of Agriculture, after which it is advertised and studied by the locker plant licensing board before receiving final approval.

196 lb. barrel of flour may be done away with

For some time there have been rumors that a change might eventually be made in the unit of flour measurement which has always been used by Canadian millers. Now comes word that the principal Canadian flour mills may shortly follow the example of the U.S.A. in doing away with what is generally regarded as an out-dated inconvenient unit, the 196 pound barrel.

If they do, they will adopt the decimal system of packing flour in larger sizes. At present quotations are based upon such fractions of the barrel as 98 pounds and 49 pounds which would then become 100 pounds and 50 pound lots. In use for some time have been the 10 pound bags and eventually, no doubt, the decimal system would be used for other smaller sized packages as well.

Any change such as this which involves a unit of measurement usually takes years to bring about, for time-honored and well-established systems, whatever they are, die hard. But should the example be set by the larger mills, which account for approximately 80 per cent of the milling capacity, there is little doubt that the proposed change will find general acceptance in Canada;

Remains rare ice-age horse found in pit at Fort Qu'Appelle

REGINA.—Remains of a rare ice-age horse which roamed the North American continent 10,000 years ago were found recently in a gravel-pit by Bernard De Vries of Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask.

Only two other instances of bones of this pony-sized horse having been found in the province are on museum records. A few teeth, also in a gravel pit, were taken near Saskatoon several years ago. The most recent discovery shows evidence of three individual animals.

To set up display

Bruce McCordquale, paleontologist at the Museum of Natural History in Regina, in making the announcement, said a display of the interesting remains would be set up at the museum in future for visitors to view. He explained that a modern type of horse evolved in North America about five million years ago, before the ice age, and migrated to Asia over a land connection between Siberia and Alaska. From descendants of these horses, which were small, agile and pony-like, man in Asia domesticated our modern horse.

Meanwhile the horses in North America became extinct around the time the glaciers were retreating approximately 10,000 years ago, and were not introduced to this continent again until the 14th century when Spanish explorers brought them to the western and southern coast of present-day United States.

Mr. McCordquale pointed out that the skeleton, which is at present found only in Africa, also developed over a very long period of years in North America, much the same as did the horse, and then migrated to Asia.

Bones and teeth

The precious bones were found in association with a tooth and portion of tusk of a Woolly Mammoth, indicating that the two mammals likely lived under the same conditions at the same time in history. The Woolly Mammoth is actually an elephant adapted to northern latitudes. In the same gravel-pit, what appears to be part of the skull of a Musk Ox was taken. Both the ice-age horse and the Woolly Mammoth are now extinct in these parts, but a few Musk Oxen are still found in tundra regions of the Northwest Territories.

Saskatchewan's Museum of Natural History is anxious to obtain further records of such material for scientific collections and exhibits, and urges people who find fossils of any sort to let the museum know as soon as possible of their find. Care should be taken if finds are transported, so that they remain intact.

There are more than 1,000,000 square miles of crown land in Canada. 3159

Sharpen your reaction time

Dr. T. K. Cureton, director of the fine Physical Education Laboratories at the University of Illinois, has found that all champion athletes appear to have one common denominator — fast reaction time. In testing athletes, Dr. Cureton found that top level performers took only one-tenth of a second to react to a command (visual and audio). The average athlete takes three-tenths of a second.

Reaction time is the interval between the moment the athlete sees or hears a command and the moment he starts his movement.

We have found at Sports College that every athlete can improve reaction time through training. The following program will bring good results:

1. The athlete must associate with reaction time a mental picture of explosiveness. We tell him to picture himself reacting to various situations at unusual speed. He must think a lot about it. He must want to start quickly.
2. The athlete must eliminate all extra weight. Even four or five pounds of fat can slow reaction time, particularly when it is in the buttock and hip area.
3. The athlete must learn relaxation to be alert but loose. Tense muscles do not react fast.
4. Flexibility is important. Complete freedom of movement in the joint areas aids quick reactions.
5. Improvement in strength will improve reaction time.
6. Reaction time training drills should be started. The athlete should do exercises involving fast initial movements of his legs, arms, head, stomach, etc., to a given command, e.g.: Feet spread; quarter, half or full turns to right and left on command. Sitting up from lying position on command. Upward jump from crouch on command. Upward jump from crouch on command (or to left, right, front or back). Other drills can be devised to fit the athlete's needs.

Why that "let down" feeling? Medical research indicates that people who have "let down" spells during the day or during athletic activity often are suffering from a drop in their blood sugar level.

Blood sugar provides an easily available source of energy fuel. One main reason why it drops according to medical opinion, is that insufficient fuel is taken at breakfast.

That's why everyone—particularly those interested in keeping their energy level high throughout the day and any athletic contest—should regard breakfast as their most important meal. And they should be particularly careful to include lots of honey—one of the best energy foods of them all—to sweeten their cereal or fruit, or on toast. Two or three teaspoons of honey will supply a good basic supply of energy fuel for the day.

For others the miracles are evidence of a wonderful life in which the supreme importance was the teaching and the life-giving power that brought new life, not to the body, but to the soul.

Jesus Himself disparaged the materialistic aspect of the miracles. To those who thronged about Him after the feeding of the 5,000 He said: "Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled."

If men once believed in the Christ because of the miracles, today they believe in the miracles because of Christ.

TRY AND STOP ME!

A confirmed baseball fan besides being an established actress, Ethel Barrymore sat next to an irate lady one day who kept hollering "Kill the umpire! Murder the bum!" The great actress protested, "You're being most unfair. That poor man hasn't done anything."

"That's what you think," hooted the lady. "He's my husband."

When Wendell Wilkie, one-time presidential candidate, was teaching school in Coffeyville, Kansas, he hit upon a novel way to make the basic doctrines of the Declaration of Independence clear to his students.

"I'm giving each of you three common, every-day buttons," he told them, "Imagine that the first represents Life, the second Liberty and the third the Pursuit of Happiness. Tomorrow I'm going to ask you to produce the buttons and tell me what they stand for."

The next day one had sadly reported that one button was missing. "Here's Life and here's Liberty," he said, "but Ma sewed the Pursuit of Happiness on my pants."

A hopeful poet, used to rejection slips, received one from a Boston publisher that followed a new line. "Your poems," it read, "are certainly good, original. Unfortunately, the original ones aren't good, and the good ones aren't original."

Four-year-old lad had stayed too long on the beach, and was brought home with a sizzler of a sunburn. In due course it reached the peeling stage. The torrid tyke was observed studying himself intently in the mirror as muttering, "Only four—and wearing out already!"

The man who, having turned 40 years of age, considers he is in perfect health would be well advised to make sure that his opinion is shared by his doctor. After that age, it may be necessary to slow down any strenuous exercise or athletics, not because of any present impairment in health but to ensure that he isn't overdoing things that might lessen his good physical condition.

History lies behind most garden flowers

An interesting history lies behind many of our garden flowers, but none has a more interesting, or indeed, mysterious history than has our common dahlia. While the plant is known to have originated in Mexico, it is said that only twice has the plant been found there.

All our modern dahlias have sprung either from the one small handful of seeds, which, less than 200 years ago, were sent from an unknown source to the Royal Gardens of Madrid; or else from one small shrivelled tuber which was found by a Dutch nurseryman in a box of bulbs from Mexico in 1872. The tuber had apparently got into the box by mistake. Curious, the nurseryman grew the tuber, and later found himself to be the possessor of the one and only known cactus dahlia in the world. From this one tuber has come all our cactus types of dahlia, and all the hybrids which have resulted from crossing this type with the first known dahlias of Madrid.

Today, however, the dahlia is found in almost every garden. They are fairly easily grown, but if you wish to grow really fine blooms, you must be sure to give them a deep, rich soil, plenty of water, and frequent cultivation.

WHAT PRICE FREE SCHOOLING IN ALBERTA?

The question going around these days is: What Price, for Free Schooling in Alberta? Over 90% of our people have been hit by the high cost of supplying books, and all the other necessities for their children to go to school. We wonder when our government are going to see the light and come back to the earth and realize that the ordinary worker is not in the position to afford the exorbitant cost of providing an education to his children today. The cost to a person with five children ranging from Grade 1 to grade 7 going to school this term is about $50.00 to start, and not including other books to come as the term goes on. It appears that our educational system is pricing the ordinary working man's children right out of education as they go along. In B.C. the system in operation is that the text books are rented to the children at a nominal cost of $3.50 for the junior grades and $4.50 for the senior grades for the term. WHY can't this be done here. Following is an excerpt from the High River times which covers our system very well. —

(High River Times)

That low moaning which is rising from the populated areas of this province is coming from parents who are facing the high cost of equipping their children for school. The note books, the text books which change with such disconcerting frequency, all the paraphernalia of learning, have been undermining the monthly budget alarmingly. Heaven help the low-income parents who have two children in high school and two in public school. Chance is they'll be eating light in September to make ends meet. They are apt to explode at mention of "free" education.

One is braced for the elegance of loose-leaf notebooks, leather covers, zipper fasteners, brief cases and such, when students reach university. It is even understandable in later high school years. But one would think children in lower grades could manage to make do on cheap forms of scribbles, if there are any such. From what one hears these youngsters have the equipment worthy of composing another Ten Commandments, Paradise Lost or Pilgrims Progress or some such-impishable genre for future ages.

And what will they write in these classy notebooks? Probably: "my favorite sport is hokkie", "North America is bounded on the north by the Pacific oshun", or "On my inside are heart, liver and stomach." or even "2 and 2 makes 5" — just the customary output of juveniles of past generations. Not that one would advocate going back to slate and pencils. The pencils were very scratchy, and the work was too quickly erased. It's good to have a record of progress over several months so that teachers, parents and pupils themselves can look back and note advance. But there is moderation in all things, and the anguished look on the faces of parents of schooling age children leads to the conclusion that school equipment is costing more than it should in view of the end result. In essentials these deluxe trappings do not seem to turn out more thoroughly qualified students than were produced thirty, forty or fifty years ago, given the same period of time in school.

It is all a part of the glamor which seems to be a governing force of this day, even extending to school. And "glamor" according to the dictionary is "delusive beauty; making something appear that which it is not." This isn't reassuring as a code of living. Conversely the word "thrill" seems to have become despicable or perhaps obsolete in the last ten of fifteen years. The urge for glamor seems to be smothering a sense of real values and children are getting a very early start.

Survey Sponsored By Power Firm

A major study of the resources, economy and industry of the Province of Alberta, with the aim of predicting the directions and rapidity of the province's economic development, has now been underway for four months. It was jointly announced today by Calgary Power Ltd., Calgary, and the J. T. Donald Co., Limited, Montreal firm of chemical and economic consultants. The study, sponsored by Calgary Power Ltd. will be carried out by a team of scientists, economist and market experts who make up the Economic and Market Research Department of the J. T. Donald firm. Scheduled for completion in a year to eighteen months, the investigation will probe every aspect of Alberta's economic life. Probably never before in Canada's history has such a far-reaching study of a Canadian province been commissioned by a private company.

Informed in Edmonton of the proposed work Alberta Provincial Government officials expressed special approval of the fact that the Donald report on Alberta's economy would be published and made available to all interested persons on its completion. "This study," said J. E. Oberholtzer, Deputy Minister of Industries and Labour, "will provide an informed opinion on Alberta's optimum directions for further growth and industrial development. This cannot but be helpful both to the province as a whole, and to those interested in participating in its great future."

Calgary Power Ltd., sponsors of the report, are major suppliers of electric power to consumers in the province of Alberta and one of the important privately-owned utility companies in Canada. Their major power project has been the extensive development of power sites in Alberta's Bow River Valley, where with due regard for flood control and water conservation, modern engineering methods have extracted the maximum power potential from the river system at reasonable cost. The Company now supplies almost two-thirds of the electricity used in the Province. In announcing the J. T. Donald study, Calgary Power emphasized that the project was being sponsored in the public service, for the information of its customers, to assist in the industrial progress of the Province and to provide a useful guide in the planning of the Company's electric system. To be conducted along completely objective lines the report will present the best available opinion on Alberta's future.

J. T. Donald & Co., Limited, Canada's oldest firm of chemical consultants, this year are celebrating their diamond anniversary. Seventy-five years ago, Dr. J. T. Donald opened his industrial laboratory in Montreal to analyse samples of gold and silver ore sent by prospectors and miners. Known as chemical analysts and assayers since that day, the firm has also specialized for many years in industrial chemical research, and more recently has added chemical engineering and economic research departments. With this group of services, the J. T. Donald Company has built and brought into operation chemical plants including that of the Canadian Salt Company in Lindbergh and that of Western Chemicals Ltd. at Two Hills, Alberta. The Alberta economies study is not the first major area survey for the firm, which has in recent years performed similar studies in the Provinces of Manitoba and Newfoundland.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

AN OLD DOG

By ANNA E. WILSON

MR. CARRINGTON could tell by the sweetness of Cissie's voice that she was intent on getting her own way. She and Ted lived in the lower flat opposite him, and their young voices drifted in from the porch.

"Now there's no sense in inviting your Aunt Sabina here for her holidays, Ted. The chances are she won't even give us a present — and that awful hat! What will the neighbors say?"

Ted's voice was unusually firm. "But, honey, Aunt Sabina's my nearest relative next to Ellie, and there isn't a kinder, better woman anywhere. She's always spent one week of her holidays with me and one on the farm. It's true, she's old fashioned in her ways, but it's not much use expecting Aunt Sabina to change. It's pretty hard to teach an old dog new tricks."

And, thought Mr. Carrington, it's harder still to make a young dog forget the tricks he's already learned. He was thinking of Cissie and Ted.

It wasn't just Aunt Sabina—it was the time Ted had wanted to spend a weekend at the farm, and Cissie had wanted to go with the rich Mrs. Baird to the beach; her voice had been just as sweet and determined then. "But darling, Mrs. Baird is so rich, she'll be staying at the very best hotel and you know I always look well in a sunhat."

"You look well in anything," Ted's voice had been adoring. "But Ellie'll be disappointed. I've been going down to help with the hayting for years."

That had been three months ago; three months punctuated with little half quarrels in which Cissie invariably got her own way. But today Ted wasn't giving in so easily.

"The spare room's empty. You could get it ready for Aunt Sabina, and in the meantime," he kissed her, "you can be thinking of a few nice things to say."

A few days later Debbie Aldrich drove up in her big blue car and after the usual feminine twillings, Debbie's rich voice drifted over. "It was good of you to ask me for a month, Cissie. I'd Cissie's feminine tremolo, 'Ted will love me in this hat, Cissie. Won't it nice of you to remember just the color that suits me best.' Then, confidently, 'How I used to envy you your clothes at school.'"

Debbie laughed. "I hated them. It made me feel self-conscious to be better dressed than the other children, but Aunt Mattie was a dress designer and used me to advise her clothes. When I left school, she put me in charge of the hat department. Oh, Cissie, I'm dying to meet your Ted."

The meeting must have been successful, for all the rest of the week, Ted's large comfortable laugh, Mary's rich contralto and Cissie's tremolo drifted up from below. Aunt Sabina seemed to be forgotten until one night Debbie went to a show.

"Now, Ted," Cissie's voice was smug. "You must admit that Debbie is more fun than that old Aunt Sabina. Those cute hats, and the car. People will think we're pretty important round here."

Ted struck a match and his pipe glowed. "You know, Cissie, I always liked Aunt Sabina's hat." He chuckled. "Always kept it in a paper bag when she wasn't using it," and then, irritably, "Say, honey, aren't we ever going to have anything to eat but creamed things. Was a time when we had steak and pie."

"Debbie likes creamed things," Cissie's voice had an edge to it, and just then Debbie came up on the porch and Ted aired his grievance. "Say, Debbie, don't you ever eat a good steak or something substantial? Cissie seems to think you live entirely on creamed things."

Debbie laughed her throaty chuckle. "Of course, Ted. Let's all go down to Ciro's and have a barbecue." But Mr. Carrington could tell that Cissie wasn't pleased, especially when Debbie began bringing home chicken and steak, laughing gaily. "You know, Cissie, I just ran across it and thought it would be nice for Ted's supper with that special sauce you make."

More and more Ted and Debbie took to playing chess in the evenings and it must have been nearly time for Aunt Sabina's letter when Ted and Cissie had their first quarrel. Cissie's voice was acid and near to tears.

"It's the way she drags food in here as if we were paupers—and clothes. I'm sick and tired of her cast-offs."

Ted was placid. "She ate, honey, so why not let her help pay the bills?"

"We could have more—" Cissie stopped and Ted finished angrily. "If it didn't cost so much expensive car, and that car certainly does give an air to the place. Folks will be saying Ted Cromers must have robbed a bank."

Aunt Sabina's letter arrived on Saturday, just as Debbie and Ted were working out a chess problem. "Now that's too bad," Ted spoke indifferently. "I'll phone Ellie and have her write to Aunt Sabina right away to let Aunt Sabina know we're full up."

Cissie's voice was determined. "Aunt Sabina isn't staying the whole two weeks with Ellie. Ted, I phoned her we would drive down and pick her up tomorrow. Debbie's going to New York and we have room. Aren't you, Debbie?"

"An absolute must. Ted, they're having the fall showing two weeks early this year. See I've put you in check."

Ted's rich chuckle boomed out. "You saw my trouble right from the first," Debbie answered. "Of course, Ted, it was only a matter of giving out enough rope. They both laughed as Debbie put away the chess."

Aunt Sabina went to bed at eight. Ted and Cissie were quarrelling over the chess men. "I'll take the red ones, Cissie. You've had them three times running. I'm changing over for luck."

"But I want the red ones," Cissie's voice was determined. Ted leaned back puffing out a big cloud of smoke. "How," he asked placidly, "did you like Aunt Sabina's hat?"

It was very quiet until Cissie spoke in a small voice. "Maybe we could take the red ones in turn. Ted, Marriage is sort of co-operative, isn't it? Sort of give and take."

Mr. Carrington chuckled. He had to admit that Aunt Sabina had looked real smart when she arrived in a brand new hat, and it was a good thing that he and Debbie had remembered to remember to remove the label from Debbie's shop.

JIMMY THOMSON, 13, is taken into custody at Palmdale, Calif., and booked on a charge of murdering his mother. Police quoted the boy as saying he shot his mother three times with a .22-calibre rifle to prove to his playmates he wasn't a 'square.' He said that's what his friends called him because he wouldn't steal.

Home Workshop

The family was large and the house was small so the three boys had to share one room. The sleeping problem was solved by this modern version of the old-time trundle bed. This one differs importantly in that any boy regardless of his length could fit any one of the three beds as they take standard springs and mattresses sold for twin beds. This is a grand way to save floor space during the day to provide for those overnight guests. All the various parts for the three beds may be cut with a hand saw. The pattern gives a cutting list of the number of each piece and the size, with illustrated assembling procedure. Copy of pattern 438 will be mailed for 35c.

The three pieces shown in the sketch are made from scraps of 1/2-inch plywood. The decoration offers a challenge to anyone who enjoys working with bright colors in intricate designs. No special skill in working with wood or in the use of paint is necessary as everything is traced directly from the pattern to the material. The different decorative motives were adapted from fine old-world tile designs. Develop them in glossy enamels and spray with thin shellac to fix the colors to withstand daily usage. This pattern 332 may be ordered separately for 35c, or it will be included in the Painting Pattern Packet of five beautiful patterns for only $1.50.

Lice on sheep can be means of poor wool

The irritation associated with an infestation of lice in sheep may be so severe as to seriously interfere with feeding and resting. As a result animals may fail to put on condition and young sheep particularly may be stunted in growth. Most important, however, is the fact that infested animals constantly rub against objects and scratch and bite at themselves and as a result the wool becomes ragged and torn.

Two kinds of lice may infest sheep, the biting louse and the sucking or foot louse. In Canada only the biting louse is of importance. The insect may occur on any part of the body, but is usually found on those parts covered with wool. Once present in a flock the lice spread very rapidly.

Undoubtedly most of the infestation occurs through direct contact with woolly animals, but clean sheep may become infested from buildings where woolly animals have been housed.

As all lice live continuously on their host, the main emphasis in treatment must be placed on the affected animal. Despite this it is always advisable to clean out the bedding when control measures are undertaken.

A variety of commercial preparations are available for the treatment of sheep infested with lice. These depend for their effectiveness on a number of different drugs including rotenone, DDT, lindane, methoxychlor, and others. The manufacturer's instructions, particularly in regard to amounts must be followed exactly. Many new preparations are becoming available and they should be used with care.

Dinosaurs being 'framed' right where they perished

JENSEN, Utah.—Those misunderstood monsters, the dinosaurs, may become better known as the result of a project to chisel away, inch by inch, a sandstone bluff, enveloping prehistoric skeletons, reports United Press.

When the job is finished, the manner in which these reptile giants were buried there better-skilled by nature 100,000,000 years ago should be evident.

Fragments of skeletons imbedded in rock give some idea of the size of the creatures, largest things which ever walked the earth. Some were 80 feet long and weighed 40 tons, yet had one-pound brains to direct their massive bodies.

Aware of find

Scene of the search into the far distant past is a quarry at the 80-acre headquarters of Dinosaur national monument, seven miles north of Jensen. Scientists first learned of it in 1909.

Apparently, dinosaurs in this area in extreme eastern Utah were wiped out suddenly by catastrophe or plague and their carcasses were washed into some depression. Sand and silt covered the remains and eventually hardened into stone. The earth's shifting crust buried the land under a sea, then lifted it up into the Uinta mountains, where weather finally exposed the now-fossilized bones.

Several skeletons were excavated from the rare deposit and were shipped to museums. Then the work languished. Although it was preserved as a national monument in 1915, Dinosaur was almost forgotten until a storm arose over plans to build a $175,000,000 dam and reservoir at Echo Park, across the Colorado border.

By that time, the original monument had been expanded to 325 square miles through inclusion of spectacular canyons of the Green and Yampa rivers. Echo Park was part of this addition.

Dinosaur monument has flourished as a by-product of the controversy. Tourists began voting larger appropriations. There is talk of elevating the monument to the status of a national park.

Reconstruct monsters This has permitted work to start on the ambitious project to display bones of the monsters just as they are uncovered in the quarry. Monument officials refer to it as an "in place" exhibit.

Under direction of Theodore E. Woodward, vertebrate paleontologist, the sandstone is being removed carefully. As each new bone is located, it is shackled to prevent disintegration.

Work is proceeding on a bank several hundred feet long and perhaps 50 feet high. Some of it already has been placed under a metal shelter.

Plans are to bring the bones out in relief from the stone along a 200-foot surface, then to build a

TOWN CHATTER

Two ardent fishermen on Saturday last journeyed to an eastern lake, location not disclosed, and were lucky enough to gather in a round dozen rainbow trout the smallest being 3 lbs., 10 oz. and 19 inches in length. We might say the weight was taken after it was cleaned. Your Journal reporter had a fine feed out of this fish, after he had to dodge getting hit in the head with it. It appears that this fish was labeled especially for me after my ribbing these two boys a short time ago on their fishing abilities. Well fellows you win and I'll believe you next time, thanks Ernie and Jack.

We hear that Chick Roughhead has once again retained his Men's Single Tennis championship of the local club. According to Jim Ewins his opponent that Chick got this same, because he did not feel quite up to scratch. We'd good going Chick just the same.

World Series fever has taken hold this last week here in Coleman, especially in the Baseball Pool department. We wonder how much of that pool money found its way into the pockets of the winners, according to one report we hear one winner after collecting $85.00 left a popular establishment with only $63.00. My, how that green stuff can disappear. What do you say Ray.

Well it finally got to it the Insurance Co's have come up with a new plan whereby you may purchase your insurance on auto's and trucks by the instalment plan. Of course it's a finance plan, but to those of us who have car or truck insurance to pay it makes it much easier on the pocketbook, and you get full coverage just the same as if you paid it all at once. While visiting with a insurance salesman here last week he showed me the plan and it's good.

To those people who can't stand sudden loud noises we offer this warning watch the pens offered by Al Krywolt, it seems he has one that wants to explode when you use it. I know, it just about blew my darned head off when I used it.

We just wonder if safety shoes would not be in order for a prominent barman who has been in the unfortunate position of stepping on nails twice in the last couple of weeks. It appears that he is building a garage and the nails are going in the wrong places, now he finds it's hard walking.
